The Hat of Buckets was invented by Nikc when he put a broken bucket on his head as a divergence for Lomp, the somewhate dim proprietor of the Junk Shop. Lomp was so impressed with the invention, he purchased the idea from Nikc, and gifted him the first prototype.

This bucket provides an additional +1 to the Block statistic (though not from attacks from above....)

Hogwarts Robes

---

Cost: £10

Amount: 1

These robes give you a +1 to all casting checks whilst you are wearing them.

Padded Gear

---

Acquired: Simon's Simple Shields

Cost: £0.5

Amount: 1

A set of thick, padded clothes which protect you from both the environment, and from your foes.

Fortifies your Block value by +2, reduces Dodge by -1

Shield Hat

---

Acquired: Purchased from Weasley's Wizarding Wheezes

Cost: £0.5

Amount: 1

First developed by the Weasley twins as a prank item prior to the Second Wizarding War, the Ministry took a great interest in the Shield Hat as a defensive item. As a result, an entirely new line of (mostly) serious products were introduced.

Outwardly, the shield hat appears to be a normal pointed wizard's hat, though a peek inside the brim reveals some glowing enchanted runes. Once per day, the wearer can mentally trigger a the hat to produce a shield which projects outwards for a few moments, before quickly fading.

This shield is equivalent to the Force Field spell cast at a third level. During the turn cycle in which the field is activated, an ethereal shield blooms into existence around the wearer.

Whenever an attack is performed against you whilst the shield is active, roll 2d4+2 and add this value to your Resist check or your Block value, as appropriate. If a successful Resist would limit the amount of damage taken, negate it entirely instead.

If you fail to Resist, or the Accuracy exceeds your augmented Block value, the shield crumples and the spell is ended. The spell which broke the shield is then applied to you at half damage, with any other effects unmodified. Any other spells which hit you this round act as normal.
